

Is he even strong enough for this job?

He's doing pretty well...for a man.

It's interesting to see a man in this role.

So good of his wife to support him having a career.

If it sounds ridiculous, that's because it is.

Comments and bias against women in your workplace undermines their real performance and harms the work of everyone.

Let's Fly Fair, spotting and speaking out against discriminatory language to build a stronger and more confident team.

He only got hired for gender diversity.

He'll ditch the job for marriage and babies, just watch.

But what does he do with the kids while he's working?

If it sounds ridiculous, that's because it is.

Comments and bias against women in your workplace undermines their real performance and harms the work of everyone.

Let's Fly Fair, spotting and speaking out against discriminatory language to build a stronger and more confident team.

